Stress

INTRODUCTION
The word “stress” is defined by the Oxford Dictionary as “a state of affair involving demand on physical or mental energy”. A condition or circumstance (not always adverse), which can disturb the normal physiological and psychological functioning of an individual. In medical parlance “stress” is defined as a perturbation of the body’s homeostasis.

Stress Can Be Positive

• Boost our inner potential and can be creatively helpful.

• Stress responses are one of our body’s best defense systems against outer and inner dangers.

• Stress can stimulate one’s faculties to delve deep into and discover one’s true potential.

“Nothing gives one person so much advantage over another as to remain always cool and unruffled under all circumstances.”
—Thomas Jefferson
CHILD Protection & Rights >

Introduction
Who is a Child?
According to international law, a ‘child’ means every human being below the age of 18 years. Childhood is characterized as a period of special consideration in human rights terms, as a period of evolving abilities and vulnerabilities relative to those of adults.

What is ‘Child’ Protection?
Child protection is crucial to ensuring that children under 18 years of age have the rights, confidence and environment in which they can make choices, express their views and communicate effectively with other children and adults.

What are ‘Child’ Rights?
Child Rights can be defined as the fundamental, vital freedoms and the inherent rights of all human beings below the age of 18. These rights apply to every child, irrespective of the child’s, parents’/legal guardian’s race, colour, sex, creed or other status.

Like adults, children are also vulnerable to stress. Stressed out and negligent parents, high expectations in academic or other performances, abused or deprived childhood, growing up tensions and demand for familial responsibility put children under immense stress.

Points to Follow for Both Children and Parents:

- Talk with your child. Find out what’s happening in his life. Be honest and open with him. He should talk about his problems or write them down. Teach him to transfer coping strategies to other situations.

- Don’t burden them with your problems. But, tell children about the family’s goals and discuss difficulties in a friendly manner.

- Compliment children when they do well, and don’t forget hugs and kisses.

- Use humor to buffer bad feelings and situations. A child who learns to use humor himself will be better able to keep things in perspective.

- Don’t overload your child with too many after-school activities and responsibilities. Let children learn to pace themselves. Don’t enroll them in every class that comes along, and don’t expect them to be first in everything.

- Set a good example. Demonstrate self-control and coping skills. He can benefit by seeing how you cope successfully with stress.

- Get friends’ or professional help when problems seem beyond your skills.

Children are often ill equipped to cope with stress during these transitions from a child to pre-adolescence, and from pre-adolescence to adolescence phases.

1. For pre-adolescents and teens, an identity crisis, the perils of peer interaction, acceptance and rejection of—situations, persons and ideas—are a constant source of anxiety. “Where do I stand?” and “How do I compare to others?” are key concerns for this age group. Choices about drinking, smoking, drugs and sex, along with fears about violence, are common stressors.

How It Can Be Helped

- The first step for parents is to be aware of possible stressors and to recognize signs of stress.

- Be sensitive to changes in your children’s behavior and respond to them.

- Provide opportunities for them to learn stress management techniques.

- Have reasonable expectations and set manageable goals in academic and extra-curricular fields.

- Be sure that you are not passing stress to your child.

- Physical exercise and sports are good stress reducers.

- Encourage relationships with extended family members, friends and helpful neighbors.
• Spending time together or having a few good laughs together goes a long way in reducing stress and in building solid family relationships.

Points That Cause Stress in Students:

• Stress is created by parental pressure to perform and to stand out among other children.

• Students who are under-performers, develop negative traits.

• Over scheduling a student’s life can put them under stress.

• School systems cram students with a tremendous amount of homework, which they usually have to complete spending their evenings, weekends and most of the vacations.
• Teenage or growing up tensions add to the academic pressures.
• When 'effortless' learning does not take place, these students lose confidence, motivation and interest, and this creates more stress.

Another major student stressor is perhaps the middle school malaise.

• On average, children's grades drop dramatically during the first year of middle school compared to their grades in elementary school.
• After moving to junior high school, children become less interested in school and less self-assured about their abilities.

• Compared to elementary schools, middle schools are more controlling, less cognitively challenging and focus more on competition and comparing students' abilities.

• Encourage students to try and learn new things. Tell them that it is OK to fail.
• Teach them that learning takes effort, time and practice.

What Can Help

Protection of Children against Corporal Punishment in Schools and Institutions

There are instances where the children have been traumatised and beaten in school resulting in grave injuries to them on account of their innocent prank, mistakes and mischief. Child being a precious national resource is nurtured and attended with tenderness and care and not with cruelty. Subjecting the child to corporal punishment for reforming him cannot be part of education.

What Can We Do?

• Teachers and use of positive discipline
The idea of 'positive discipline' techniques concentrate on reinforcing positive behavior of children.

• Role of parents:
Parents are in most cases the first adults to whom a child takes his/her problems.
Protection Issues

- Protecting children in difficult circumstances including natural disasters:
  - Children in Need of Care and Protection
  - Child in Conflict with Law
- Elimination of child labour
- Protecting children from being trafficked for commercial and sexual exploitation
- Protecting children affected by HIV/AIDS

Current Initiatives

- Amendment of Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000
- Comprehensive Scheme “Integrated Child Protection Programme”
- Adoption Scheme
Proposed Integrated Child Protection Scheme (ICPS)

- GOI has proposed to combine its existing different child protection schemes under one integrated scheme.

- It aims to provide for care and protection of all the children in conflict with law and children in need of care and protection.

- It proposes to involve steps to:
  - Strengthen families and prevent them from breakup and children becoming homeless and without care and protection.
  - Provide support to children already outside the mainstream, beginning from emergency outreach services to final rehabilitation with their families' society.

Components of the Scheme

The components of the scheme would be broadly divided in two categories:

- Juvenile in conflict with law, and
- Children in need of care and protection.
Indian Govt Has Taken Steps to Reduce Exam Related Stress

Union Human Resource Development (HRD) minister Kapil Sibal in a written reply in the Lok Sabha today said the Centre has taken the issue of students’ suicide seriously and a number of steps have been taken to reduce examination related stress.

Admitting that the suicides committed by students are a matter of great concern, Sibal said that various socio-economic factors contribute to the stress and anxiety among students, specially the school children.

- (IIT) has taken several measures to reduce the academic strain on weak students through special slow pace programme, mentoring programmes and providing facilities for psychiatric interventions.
- The Central Government has also taken specific measures to check anti-ragging including sensitizing the various stakeholders with the help of the media.
- Anti-ragging help line has also been made with call facilities in English, Hindi and other regional languages.

Books Published

- These books are kept in the Libraries of different schools and colleges for awareness of students as well as the teaching and ministerial staff. Some books are even kept in the UN-Congress Library at New Delhi.
- Teachers of various school are interacting with the students on these issues in zero hours.
